

What Makes A Safety Manager

Managing safety is not a job - it's a purpose

The Safety Manager's motto is "Duris Non Frangor" – "Unbreakable Perseverance."

Qualities Required of a Safety Manager Include:

- The skills of a diplomat to bring together a wide variety of often conflicting interests under a genuine commitment to safety.
- The extraordinary powers of observation and deduction of Sherlock Holmes in order to anticipate potential scenarios that could cause death or injury.
- The Wisdom of Solomon to determine the proper path to workplace safety in spite of the quagmire of often confounding, conflicting, and inadequate regulations and safety philosophies.
- The audacity of George Patton to relentlessly and fearlessly attack any enemy of workplace safety.
- A world-class sales person who can convince top management to eagerly give both their money and their time to create a safe workplace for every worker.

The lastly, the Heart of a Pastor who genuinely cares about every individual under their scope of responsibility and gives selflessly of themselves for the benefit of others
